About 11 o'clock yesterday morning an anknown man was drowned in the river about 200 feet from the Ohio shore opposite the foot of Thirty-fourth street, and Jeorge, an eleven-year old son of Coroner Schultze, who was rowing the man across the river, had a narrow escape from the same fate. The circumstances connected with the affair, as told by the boy and an eye winess, are as follows: Young Schultze has a john-boat, a leaky, water logged old affair, that he has often been warned by his parents to keep out of. Night before last one of his older brothers took an axe and went down to the river to destroy the boat, but finally decided to haul it up on the bank, whence he thought George would not be able to get it back into the river. Yesterday morning George went down to the river and managed to get the boat into the water. by Council in accordance with the terms of the ordinance recently passed, designed to keep the disbursements of the city within the limits of its revenues.

There were present Chairman Hildreth and Messrs. Peterson, Hoffman and Waterhouse. It was the first time in the history of the city, that this committee was eyer-called on to act in such a matter, and there was some question as to how to proceed. There was laid on the table the last annual statement of Clerk Bowers, the pile of estimatas and several sheets of figures prepared by Clerk Bowers. The proceedings were opened by Clerk Galligan reading from the ordinance the duties of the Finance Committee in the matter. The estimates being referred to it, it must first ascertain the amount of money that will be required under the provisions of all loan ordinances to meet the lawful demands of creditors or commissioners during the current very sheep and one carload of horses were shipped east over the Baltimore & Ohio yesterday.

Failing in this they tried the doors and windows of the lower part of the house and found one window, a small one opening on a little narrow passage way leading from the front to the mar of the house, that was unfastened. They picked up a wash bench in the back yard and carried it into the passage way to stand on in order to reach the window. In propping the window up they made some noise, which awakened a baby of Mrs. Richards, living next door. It cried and wakened its mother, who started to get up. As she did this, the blind to the window of the room she was in was pulled aside by one of the burglars. Mrs. Richards screamed and told the intruder to travel or she would shoot. The next minute both men dashed out of the yard and ran upstreet. By the marks of their feet on the wash bench it was seen that they had taken off their shoes and were in their stockings. The night police cannot be too vigilant. It might do no harm for the Chief to slip around at night occasionally and see that the men are all on their poper beats. Wheeling "Suspects" Captured.

A telegram was received by the authorities here yesterday from St. Clairsville saying that two men had been arrested there who were from Wheeling, and answered the description of the two men recently engaged in robberies and burglaries hereabouts. No names were given, but a special telegram to the Unturnous received late last evening says the two men are Clifford Fox and James Engle, and that they were discharged from the Wheeling Workhouse on April 15. Fox is described as about five feet eleven inches tall, smooth face, light complexion, with a scrofulous scar below both ears; aged nineteen. Engle is well known here. He is about five feet eight inches tall, of square build and light complexion, and has a squint in both eyes. It was said that material for masks, such as have recently been used hereabouts, was found on the men, but whether this is authentic could not be learned.

He first came into prominence hereabouts by having a child burned to death at Stoubenville. He and his family were living there in a shore boat and the little one had been sent on shore to cook a meal. Her clothes caught fire and she was burned to death. He was next heard of at Parkersburg, where he was arrested for chicken stealing. While in jall he ground out some machine poetry which he paimed off on the State Journal, and galled the roporter of that paper into believing that he was a grandson of the English poet Campbell. As the English poet had but two sons, and one died young and the other was a born invalid, the thinness of the thief's story was easily seen by all but the State Journal's man, who gave Campbell the benefit of numerous notices.
